Wartime pilot takes to the air again

Neville Duke, a wartime pilot, took to the air again yesterday to fly a Hawker Hunter on the same flight he made 30 years ago when he broke the world speed record.

After renewing his partnership in the sky with the Hunter, Mr Dake, aged 61, said: "It was marvellous."

Clutching a bottle of champagne after his 30-minute flight, he said it had brought back many memories and that he would like to do it again - "maybe on the 35th anniversary"

The flight followed the original record course at Littlehampton, Sussex, where, on September 7, 1953, he set a record of 727.63 mph when he was chief test pilot for Hawker's. Yesterday he nudged 700 mph, flying at

But she said that a clear breach between the TUC and the Labour Party would take a long time.

Hattersley for the deputy leader-ship of the Labour Party would be "a close run thing". Mrs Williams, who was in Blackpool to speak to SDP trade unionists, quoted with approval the words of Mr Len Murray, the TUC general secretary, who told the conference earlier that the unions' duty to put their members' case wherever possible meant "not only talking with the Government but talking to a political party which has a chance of forming a government in the future". It was clear, she said, that Mr Murray's definition embraced the SDP. The Social Democrats are hoping for a positive response from the TUC general council to the invitation sent two weeks ago hy Dr David Owen, the party leader, to Mr Murray as well as to each TUC-affiliated union. Dr Owen sought comments on his party's own proposals for union reform, and asked if he could meet the union representatives for discussions.

Plea to simplify claiming of improvement grants

From Hogh Clayton Environment Correspondent Brighton

The Government yesterday appealed to local authorities to make it more simple for householders to elaim improvement grants. Sir George Young, an Under Secretary at the Department of the Environment, said that some people were "put off because they cannot face the complexity and delay in the system".

Sir George said at a conference of the Institution of Environmental Health Officers in Brighton that 75,000 grants had been approved in the second quarter of this year, compared with 70,000 in the whole of 1981. But there were complaints of delays, lasting several months, and some people has despaired of the system and withdrawn their claims.

debate on education. Mr Jenkins, general secretary of the Association of Scientific, Technical and Managerial Staffs, expressed the TUC's courage at government proposals to privitize parts of the educational system. "Privitization means private intel-lectual poverty for those who cannot afford otherwise", he said. TUC polices for education were at the heart of the labour movement's philosophy of a society that gave everyone an equal chance in life. The reforms they were seeking were a fundamental basis not just for economic regeneration using snareholders' money must be made more accountable to share-holders, Mr Bryan Stanley, general secretary of the Post Office Engineering Union, said. Mr Jenkins said that a recent leak from the Treasury was that more cuts in public spending would be needed to stave off tax increases. He predicted that the Conservative manifesto would promise to sell off everything in sight to cut the taxes of those still in work.

Behind the figures lay hidden the real truth about growing educational deprivation for children and young people. "We are seeing the creation of a workless class which is growing np illiterate and innumerate", Mr Jenkins said.

Mr Fred Smithles, general secretary of the National Associ-ation of Schonimasters/Union of Women Teachers, said the Government was set on a policy of economies that could lead only to the most harmful effects on education provision at all levels. He was introducing a motion calling for was introducing a motion calling for expansion of the education service,

Such a service should provide musery education for all, a statutory period of education lot an a statutory period of education and training in the age group 5-18 that cattered for individual needs and equipped all for adult life, and a comprehensive open access system of education and training throughout life. Mr Peter Griffin, of the National union of Teachers, seconding the motion, said they seemed to be locked into an economic plan of public expenditure cuts past, present, and future. Too many people regarded that situation as inevitable and incapable of change. Sir Keith Joseph, secretary of State for Education and Science, had told the NUT that education must take its share of the sacrifices that had to be made. They had told him that the sacrifices were being made by the childreo and that the sacrifice too great. The opportuinties that children lost now they lost for ever. The union knew of state schools where parents were contributing as much again as the local authorices. The privatization of the edu-cational element of the Govern-ment's Youth Training Scheme was condemned by the cougress as detrimental to the interests of young people. Mr Ralph Gayton, of the National and Local Government Officers' Association, moving a motion on eduction and trainin said that an increasing oumber of businesses were purportinhy to be educational and training bodies. They gave no guarantee of standards and were concerned just to make a profit.

The motion, which also called for the full involvement of trade unions in constructing vocational training and education programmes and emphasized the need for local, democratically accountable control of educational services, was carried nanimously. Mr Gaytoo said that private education contractors would not in a practice be accountable to the 7. Manpower Services Commission, which was sponsoring the Youth Training scheme, still less to the local authorities in whose areas they

Mr Leo Morray warned members yesterday that "in setting out our objectives it is just not good enough to say more for everybody". Congress went on to vote for an objective appraisal of TUC policies and of realistic projorities, and instructed the general conncil to "prepare a statement of the principles of modern trade unionism and the steps required for the trade union movement to prosper".

What are the political conse-quences likely to be? If the trade union movement were to develop a positive and comprehensive economic policy that commanded the overwhelming support of its members, this could revive the. fortunes of Labour and restore the identification of the unions with the party. The easiest way for the mions to secure the adoption of a new eco policy in which they had real confidence and to which they nce and to which they attached the highest priority would be for them to push it through the Labour Party conference and then to get the party returned to office.

But one of the features of the British trade union movement throughout its history has been the weakness of its central structure. It is not well equipped to developa new comprehensive policies that take account of uncomfortable modern realities and command the enthusiastic support of the membership. especially at a time when the views and interests of the members have become so varied. The process of reappraisal on which the TUC has now embarked is only at a very early and tenmtive stage. It is only the beginning of the beginning in the march towards reality. This initiative is more likely, therefore, to yield a large inited policies and a particular style of operation. The style would be one that gave priority in practice, whatever might be said In theory, to negotiations with happened to be in government. The need for such negotiations has been a frequent theme at Blackpool this week.

To be successful they would have to be conducted largely within the framework of that government's strategy. The TUC could dissociate itself firmly from the strategy and could certainly the strategy and could certainly seek to adjust it at the margin. But to spend much time challeng-ing the strategy head-on in discussions would turn the dislogue into an empty rhetorical exercise.

If this pragmatic approach were followed, it would gradually but perceptibly lead to a greater distancing of most trade unions from the Labour Party, whatever union leaders themselves might say or even intend.

A call to the Government to review its policy on arts funding and make more money available for the arts was contained in a motion successfully moved by Mr Peter Plouviez, general secretary of Equity, and seconded by Mr John Morton, secretary of the Musicians Union.

The motion referred to the statement of the House of Commons Select Committee on Education, Science, and the Arts that the arts in Britain were wcre irresponsibly underfunded. The congress called for the immediate restoration of the £1.8m cut in the with government", he said. One good reason for being in the NEDC was that it enabled the TUC to engage in that wider dialogue. Another good reason was that it exposed ministers to reality. Ministers, like unions and employers, had to face the facts of industrial life. That was the general council's case for staying in the NEDC, hammering home the realities and keeping at it.

They had to put their members' case wherever they could and that meant talking with the Government, "When we go to talk with ministers, and oot just on their chosen agenda, we do oot carry rose tinted spectacles with us, indeed very often a long spoon is sometimes more appropriate. But talk we must when that is the best way of serving our members.

Mr Murray said the TUC had survived many changes of government. It had won through because it never forget that it had to serve and represent its members. The TUC General Council still did not believe the Government's policy made sense to support its policies. Apparently many did not find intolerable the results of Conservative rule.

Ho continued: "They voted. We respect that. We cannot talk as if the trade mion movement is some sort of alternative government. Brother Bounie Prince Charlie waiting to be summoned back from exile."

Judged by results, the Government was profoundly wrong. The economy was flat on its back. There was nothing to suggest that Britain's underlying economic and industrial problems had been solved. Above all, they must judge the Government's policies by anemployment, by four million people idle.

Britain most have at the core of its economy a competitive and healthy manufacturing sector. It was right to denisud measures to assist economic recovery. Support was growing for a major programme

The TUC needed to reexamine its economic programme and the role of its, economic review. In setting out objectives, it was not good enough to say "more everybody". Members expected response "more for ind realistic leadership.

The Korean airliner disaster Russia 'ready to do it again'

From Nicholas Ashford Washington

The Reagan Administration has given warning that the Soviet Union had made clear it would shont down nny other airliner that strays into its airspace in the same way as it destroyed the South Korean jumbo jet last week. Responding to the most recent Soviet statement on the disaster which admitted for the first time that a Soviet fighter downed th Korean airliner but which sought to blame the US for the tragedy a top Reagan Administration official also expressed serious concern about "the competence of the Soviet air defence system, with all the banger that implies". As he war of words continued between Moscow and Washington over what President Reagan has described "the Korean airline massacre" the US stepped up efforts to persuade other Western countries to express their borror at what happened by taking punitive measures against the Soviet Union.

There has been some disap-pointment, however, that Canada has been the only member of Nato so far to suspend flights by Acroflot, the Soviet airline. But the officials remained hopeful that other nations would follow suit, under pressure from the International Federation of Airline Pilots' Associations which has recommended that its 57,000 members impose a two-month ban on flights to Moscow.

Making a formal response to the Soviet statement on behalf of the Reagan Administration, Mr Lawrence Eagleburger, the Under-Secretary of State for political nifairs, accused Moscow of continuing to "lie to the world" even while admitting that a Soviet fighter shot the airliner down.

He ngain called on the Soviet Union to make an unequivocal apology for what happened and to pay enmpensation to the families of the victims, 61 of whom were Americans.

The US, he said, was particularly incensed by a passage in the Soviet statement saying "we will continue to act in keeping with our legislation, which is fully in accord with international regu-lations. This wholly applies to the question of ensuring the security of our borders." being asked by the Soviet Union Mr Eagleburger said this to accept that it is not bound by amounted to a declaration that the norms of international the Soviet Union would "take the behaviour and decency.

Nastasia Filipovna Riverside Studios

Andrzej Wajda's production of The Possessed, which appeared in the World Theatre season /10 years ago, revealed Cracow's Stary Theatre as one of the great acting troupes of the world; and it is good to welcome Wajda and two magnificent members of his team - Jerzy Radziwilowicz and Jan Nowicki (who played Stavro-Jan redwicks (who played Stavro-gin io The Possessed) - back to London. But it is only fair to point out that what they have brought us is less a play than an act of dramatic speculation which is largery inaccessible to non Rel is largely inaccessible to non-Pol-

The fatal Nastasia has abandoned Prince Myshkin on the eve of her wedding and fled with his rival/alter ego Rogozhin. Myshkin goes to Rogozhin's house and discovers that he has stabbed her through the heart What develops in the chapter, if such a piece of writing can be summarized, is a coming-together of the two long-divided men in a tenderly mortal pact that finally reduces Rogazhin to terminal delirium and the prince to permanent lunacy. In Wajda's version, as yon steal into the room with the debris of a supper nn the heavy table and Nastasia's corpse laid out behind the curtains, the last meeting has aiready begun, and its atmosphere is notably at variance with that of the povel.

Oncomoving element about the chapter is its arrival on a plane beyond violetice, where the brutally sardonic Rogozhin now treats his companion with extreme sensitivity, and refers to his crime with alienated detachment. On Wajda's stage it is still the old Rogozhin, crouched dangerously across the table and pouring out an avalanche of feverish conions to the mute and immobile prince.

Radziwilowicz's . Prince, white suit in studied contrast to Rogozhin's black, conforms much more closely to Dostbevsky's. Toussaint Coliseum

"Rather a grisly story, dear", said a voice in the first interval. Grisly, depressing, but important too: Anthony Wood's retelling of the saga of bloodshed, prejudice. rivalry and corruption as Haiti snatched its independence at the end of the eighteenth century has only gained in significance in six years since Toussaint was the first seen at the Coliseum. The issues of race, colour and the Aristocracy of the Skin which it addresses are now uncomfortably close to us, and if the spectre of revolutionary change seems as far away as ever in this country, there are plenty of examples of its mixed blessings glaring at us around the world.

So nne desperately wants Toussaint to work as an opera, to persuade us that this most unwieldy of art forms can address vital issues. And the first thing to report is that, in this newly revised and condensed version that David Blake has made of the piece, with a typically inventive and flamboyant production by David Pountney, it does work, for much of the time, The focus now is firmly on Toussaint himself and on his people: a difficult balance to keep, between the individual dilemmas of the leader and the power of the crowd, but one that is well controlled. Neil Howlett is the nnly member of the cast left from 1977, and he brings authority, strength and - almost most important - audibility to the part of the hlack slave. He alienates our sympathies by double-dealing pretty early on.

The only figure who attracts our sympathy is Toussaint's wife Suzanne, which is odd because she is helpless on the sidelines of the main struggle. Sarah Walker originally sang the part: Anne-Marie Owens now brings humanity and gentleness It is astonishing, and a tribute to the resourcefulness of the ENO team, that such a vast new cast can be found in the house. There

Peter Grimes New Theatre, Cardiff

As the inhabitants of the borough resume the bustle of their daily lives in the final scene of Britten's opera, Ellen Orford sits alone and dejected, a woman devastated hy the knowledge that she has failed. This polgnant touch, diverging slightly from the printed score, is just one of many that make John Copley's production of Peter Grimes for Welsh National Opera such a thrilling, and chilling, experience. It is io repertory in Cardiff, and is also going on tour to Birmingham, Bristol, Liver-pool and London, and it should oot be missed. Robin Don's sets may be dominated by bare wooden boards, but goodness me, how evocative they arc. With lighting by John Waterhouse, the cold colours of his misty Act I are some outstanding cameos: Hilary Western as a white mulatto, accused of being 127 parts white and one part black; Eilene Hannan as Napoleon's vain sister and ber two attendants, all condemned by Pountney to do their scene suspended above the soldiers on stage. Richard Angas is an imposing, noble Moise sacrificed by Toussaint in a powerful scene; Stuart Kale, Geoffrey Pogson, Dennis Wicks and several others provide inventive caricatures.

Other of Pountney's ideas work better, the scurrying of an absurd chariot around the stage, the posturings of the commissi and generals, and above all the manipulation of the vast crowds, both in moments of despair and rebellion, and in the exotically distasteful scenes of triumph that accompany Toussaint's victory. Several times Pountney oversensationalizes for effect: an extra-nasty stahbing, an extra onstage shooting, and so nn. The scipiece battle scene, with giant wooden structures wheeling wooden structures wheelin around the stage and cannon blasting, is too impersonal; we should see the people.

But it is David Blake's music which makes the most ambigous effect: through the whole length of the evening it draws sounds of wonderfully varied, subtle colours from the orchestra (and is on this occasion splendidly controlled and paced by Lionel Friend), and the vncal music sustains a naturalness and continuity of line which is always reassuring and attractive to listen to. There are a few nods to ethnomusicology in the apparently authentic taped drums, and effective irony in the set-piece pastiebes.

Yet I miss the grit, the sheer unpleasantness which should surely hit out at us if this subject is to be brought to life: the big choruses in particular have an uncomfortably sanctimoninus effect. There is a fundamental problem of some here: we remain not quite alienated, but not quite involved. Toussaint is a magnificent achievement, but it does not drive its point bome.

personalities and the buman conflicts of the opera itself. Admittedly Britten does much of the singers' job for them by providing music that is sharply characterized, but this scarcely lessened the perception of Helen Watts's sinister, busybodying Mrs Sedley, Peter Massocchi's pompons Swallow, Menai Davies's warm-hearted Auntle and Terence Sharpe's Captain

Balstrode. Josephine Barstow's Ellen Orford is a masterpiece of warmth and vulnerability, of compassion and tenderness. She sings marvellously and acts with a sure purpose so that her intepretation leaves an impression of completeness and utter commitment. John Mitchenson's Grimes is more problematical (perhaps intentionally so) in that his ontcast is neither bero oor villain, neither mad nnr sanc, and his singing, London's most indispensable n chestra, the London Sinfonietta, never fail to come up with thought-provoking programmes. In Tuesday's Prom, in which they were conducted by Lothar Zagro-sch. not only did they intelligently contrast the music of Kurt Well and Stravinsky, but they managed to choose four extremely perti-acal compositions: two, alarmingly different works by Weill, and a pair of pivotal masterpieces by Stravinsky. And it almost goes without saying (though it should still be said) that the playing was magnificently alive, whatever the style of the music.

The Times Profile: The SDP

The SDP has abandoned the rolling conferences of the past two years which took in three different venues in a single week and apparently strained the railway system to its limit. The getlogether which begins on Sunday will be in the static and modest surroundings of the University of Salford. The Social Democrats have come down to carth and are in a leaner and more sober state than when they rushed around the country in 1981 and 1982.

Just how much leaner it is hard to say. The present membership is put at say. The present memoership is put at 60.000 - 5.000 down on the peak achieved in the middle of last year. But SDP officials privately admit that the figure may exaggerate the party's real size. The general election interrupted the process of chasing up those who had not renewed their subscriptions in the first quarter of this year, and their the first quarter of this year, and their names are still on the computerized list of members, although several have left the party. It will not be until the autumn that the total number of these "defaulters" is known. Richard Newby, the SDP's acting administrator, says that in 1982 the renewal rate of members was around 75 per cent. He hopes it may be up to 80 per cent this year, but even that would leave the party with 12,000 fewer members than in 1983. New members are coming in at the rate of about 100 a week - only half the number needed to keep the overall membership from falling. For a party almost entirely dependent on subscriptions for its income, this has serious consequences.

The finance committee already believes considerably less money will be coming in during the next 12 months than there was in the first two years of the SDP's existence. Falling otembership is only one rcason for this expected decline in revenue: far fewer donations are expected from well-wishers. During the carly period revenue came in on a slaggering scale. There was even a cheque for £1,000 from a committed Tory who said he would never vote for the SDP but liked what they stood for. A special appeal for the general election fund raised £1m, from nearly 15.000 members. It is generally accepted that generosity on this scale will not continue now that the initial

Mr Rodgers sounds positively That-cheresque in his attachment to the principle of good housekeeping. "We are going to have to pull in our horns and be extremely prudent but I think we ought to be able to run a modest operation." he said.

An early indication of this new mood of retrenchment was the savage pruning of staff that took place this summer. The number of those on the full-time payroll has been reduced from 53 to 28 in a move which shocked staff by its speed and extent and provoked some complaints from their union. Apex.

Heading the list of those who have gone hy mutual consent is Bernard Doyle, the former company director who was chosen from more than 320 applicants in June 1981 to be party's the first chief executive. He had indicated for some time that he wanted to go after the election. His two-year rule over the administration of the fledgling party came in for some criticism from staff who felt he lacked political sense and was inclined to be autocratic. But his critics concede that he had a difficult job in having to deal with all four of the party's joint leaders. Another key figure who will shortly be leaving at his own request is Roger Carroll, former political editor of The Sun who was brought in to be the party's director of communications. He and Mr Doyle each commanded a organizer, or chief agen1 - is likely to remain with Alec McGivan, another 30-year-old Oxford graduate who has been involved with the SDP since its formation. Others who have already left include Christopher Smallwood, a former Treasury high-flyer who was the party's first policy coordinator: Liz Astill, the conference organizer, and Paul Rossi, the local government officer. The SDP has lost through retirement its Scottish agent. Bunty Urquhart, a redoubtable 15.000 members. It is generally agent. democracy and to detailed and decentralized policy-making. The three postal ballots of members which were held last year to elect the leaders, the president and national committee, and ratify the constitution, lost more than £70.000.

The number of dctailed policy papers issued from the party's Cowley freet headquarters is also likely to diminish considerably. The policy department, which under Christopher smallwood had a staff of five, has been reduced to one officer and a secretary. Under Smallwood, an elaborate Civil Service-style policy-making process was devised which involved working parties producing bulky green papers for circulation to local parties for

Who are the SDP members? A

The answer is that no one really knows, least of all the SDP itself, which is hoping to instalt a computer soon which will give it a detailed profile of membership. What the party will say is that, while it has members spread across the country, there is a disproportionate concentration in the southeast (the largest area parties are in Enlield, Camden, Kensington and Chelsea. Oxford and Cambridge), and that they are "a pretty affluent group, mostly io middle to senior positions in their professioo and very well-qualified". The details will be clearer by the end of the year. The most detailed survey of SDP members is that made by Opinion Research Ltd for London Weekend Television's Weekend World programme in November 1981 in which nearly 10,000 questionaires were sent to 22 area parties across the country. The replies soll give the best indication of the profile of the party although obviously the picture may

The only significant group he feels the party may have lost consists of some of the founder-members who came from the Tory Party and returned to their former allegiance at the time of the Falklands conflict. A prominent group of former Young Conservatives who joined the SDP, however, have remained loyal and two of them, Stuart Bayliss and David Wilks, were candidates in the election. Defectors from Labour seem to have stayed with the SDP and there are hopes of more recruits from this source if the party moves leftwards after next month's conference.

The so-called "political virgins" who make up the bulk of the SDP membership also seem to be sticking with the party. "Some threw themselves into things a bit too much and

Points from the Mailbag From J. G. Boston-Crabbe

From J. G. Boston-Crabbe Sir, I much enjoyed your piece oo aerobie danciog yesterday. Io the years 1946-53 I worked for the Foreign Office as the British Consul in Aerobia, and your references brought back many happy memories. (You may have read my book, 3,000 Miles From Harrods.) I well remember the Aerobie folk doing their tradidonal dances, and thinking at the time that such strenuous manoeuvres might well please the rain gods, but woold not do the body much good. In fact the average Aerobic was crippled by the time he was 40, so I think your strictures on their dancing are well justified.

From Arthur Pelmct Sir, I echo your reservations about the Sir, I echo your reservations about the spread of zerobic dancing. I wonder if you saw a feature in The Guardian last week, headed: "Does Aerobic Dancing give you a lithe body, or does it ruin your joints?" I appreciate the note of concern, but I wonder if anyone but a Guardian reader would ever think of doing aerobic dancing and smoking a joint at the same time. same time.

From Wilson Parkway Sir, You claim that your oew method of dancing does for the mind what Lionel Blair does for the body. I question whether anyone would want a mind that was brown, leathery and full of laugh-lines. yours

From Sally Popping-Crease Sir. It is an absolute scandal that there are still places like Lord's Pavilion and West End Clobs where women may not enter. Luckily, there are now many dance studios which ooly admit women, and I derive a sense of freedom from my aerobic dance classes at the Shahimar Club on a Wednesday which a man could ooly dream of. Yet I oow learn that there are American spy planes flying night and day through our skies, photographing scenes such as our dance sessions, with no law to stop them. And who pilots these planes? Men! Honestly, it makes me so cross.

From J H Unlightly Sir. We are taught that true case of movement comes from wearing loose-fitting clothing, such as that favoured by prac-titioners of judo or Arabs in their flowiog robes. Yet women who go in for aerobic dancing persist io wearing these constricting leotards, which are not only tight-fitting but, to my miod, far from fetching.

I prefer, for my more relaxed moments, to dress up in long ball gowns or costumes such as those worn by Paris coquettes of the 1890s, and I wooder if any other men readers share my interests. I am sure they could cootact me via this column.

From Ms Penny Lane Sir, I recently joloed an aerohic danciog class, not so much for the physical recreation as to enrich my social life and meet more people. It certainly worked. In our first session I ficked my back and sloce then I have made firm friends with an orthopaedie surgeoo, an osteopath, three ambulance drivers and a very nice man from an insurance company, to whom I am now eogaged. 'The fact is", said William Rodgers, chairman of the finance committee, "Ihat boardrooms are very happy with a conservative government and are very happy that the Labour Party is in its present state, so there is no real reason for them to support us."

Mr Rodgers said he will be taking a "cautious and sober" message to Salford next week. "We bave got to live within our means and that involves financing ourselves out of have a dampening effect on the SDP's have changed in the last 18 months.

There is considerable uncase among both staff and local party members about the axing of the SDP's three regional offices in Manchester, Birmingham and Bristol, which cost about £20,000 a year each to run. This closure is likely to be the subject of strong criticism at next week's confercnce by party members who see it as a misguided act for a party committed to decentralization.

A new law of evidence in Pakistan, approved by the Council oo Islamie ideology, in effect equates the value of the testimony of one man with that of two women.

The women of Pakistan - that is to say, the bright, urban, educated, articulate upper-middle-class women see it as a symbol of their coming oppression. The mullahs are oo the march. Presideot Zi ul-Haq, seeking a banner behind which to unite his people, has found one in islamizadon. The President, who seized power as chief martial law administrator six years ago is, everyone who knows him agrees, a devout Muslim. The official nationalist and religious fervour he is institutionalizing has a pressing logic in a state which was founded only because its inhabitants were Muslims. "It is our raison d'être, says a staunch defender of the drive.

But the women took over the border to the west, and see what is happening to tran, where islamization rules. They look at Saudi Arabia, whose funds underwrite much of Pakistan's comfortable economic expansion. And they do not like what they see.

They fear, for example, a change in Pakistan's family law, which is being clamoured for by certain mullahs. At present the law says that a man may not take a second wife unless either his first consents, or unless she is barren or insane. The islamizers insist that the Koran authorizes no such wifely interference in a husband's prerogative. In Pakistan's two tribal provinces. Baluchistan and North West Frontier Province, the burga is a commonsight. It is not uncommon in 5ind and the Punjab too. To western eyes the burga is a symbol of man's oppression of women. It is an item of clothing like a bell tent, enveloping its instep with a lacy porthole from which to peer.

"I've tried one on," said a woman diplomat. "They are hol and sweaty inside, and terribly dangerous - your peripheral vision is virtually nil." But the burgua derives from a

Koranic injunction calling for women to dress modestly and to avert their eves in public. It also seems to originate from a stern male morality which accuses womao of being the root of all evil, and as in Genesis. lempting man with her sexual attraction. The spirit that designed the burga is

The islamizers complain now of the immodest dress of the cahin staff on Pakistan International Airways, although anything more modest would be difficult to imagine: they are already covered from head to foot in the shalwar and kameer, the baggy pants and overshirt that has been prescribed as nadonal dress for men and women this. alike. Women have historically been in a culturally inferior position in Pakistan, and the present day statistics show how bad it is. They form 48.3 per cent of Pakistan's 87 million population, but only 14 per cent of them can read and write (in the countryside only 6 per cent). A third of the pupils in primary schools are girls, but in secondary schools only 12 per cent of the pupils are girls in towns; 3 per cent in the countryside. Women hold less than 3 per cent of the civil jobs, and less than 1 per cent of the executive jobs in government service, banking or business.

These figures come from the report

Fiction and poetry: novels by Salman Rushdie, Melvyn Bragg, A. N. Wilson, thrillers, historicals, and new verse

Pitch-black comedy of public life

Shame

By Salman Rushdie (Cape, £7.95)

Salman Rushdie's ferociously funny third novel is about history. politics, scandal, memory and the needs of popular myth. The protagonist is Pakistan: "insuffi-ciently imagined ... a miracle that went wrong a failure of the dreaming mind". To find contemporary fiction in which wasteful tragedy, bloody melo-drama and brilliant farce are combined with such confidence into situation and brilliant farce are into plausible nightmare you must turn to novels like One Hundred Years of Solitude, Dog Years of The Tin Drum. In terms Rushdie is a English exuberant, latter-day Jacobean much is made of the slob more than twenty-five years fact that the story takes place in her senior, Omar Khayyam Shakil the twentieth (Christian) and - immunologist of distinction and tifteenth (Hegiran calendar) cenfact that the story takes place in the twentieth (Christian) and luries simultaneously, and the the now righteous Isky. With no Renaissance ethics of Machiavel more than a small smith in the h's prince are invoked towards direction of Robert Louis Steventhe end

Shame is every bit as good as Midnight's Children - to whose cpic comedy of modern Indian history it is the necessary and intended companion - and in many respects it is a better book. It luxuriates less in the traditions of oral narrative, and contains mercifully fewer teasing diversions into the novelist's options and techniques, even though Rushdie himself now tells the story. The threads of metaphor, links between public and private life are pulled tighter

Often bloodthirsty and sometimes slapstick, much of the comedy is also deliciously delicate: a village of white concu-hines, for instance, giggling their frilly way through a badminton tournament, or the wedding of Good News Hyder as yet another tyrannous government falls:

tyrannous government falls: Why the guests refused to eat: already unbalanced by the daingers ci the streets, they had been almost completely deranged by the infor-mation, which was conveyed to them on little hand-written erratum slips which Bilquis had been writing out i'r hours, that while the bride was which Bilquis had been writing out i'r hours, that while the bride was which the expected Good News Figure, there had been a last minute ciange of groom, "Owing to change of groom. Merely a slight change of feature, after all, and Bilquis is the caughter of a cinema manager whose misplaced religious talerance had led him to believe that he could show double-bills appealing to both Muslim and Hundu and had cost him his life in partition of India in 1947 to beyond the (sadistically projected) fail of the present regime in Pakistan. Raza Hyder is the novehist's extension of President Zia ul-Haq, and Rushdie rewrites the short history of the Land of the Pure as a duel to the death between protégé and patron, soldier and stat esman Raza versus Iskander Harappa - alias Isky, alias Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. Raza destroys Isky and is himself destroyed. Both men are failed dynasts who lack sons (another ca shame) and each, at times, plays father to the other. Isky's daughter will avenge him after the death of Raza; Raza's Suffya becomes the element of fear itself, but marries, to the delight and amazement of all, an amorphous. son. Miss Hyder becomes Mrs Shakil, takes into herself all the unfelt shame of the others and becomes "Pandora, possessed by the unleashed contents of her own box". All bell is let loose. Omar is the son of either Chhunni, Munnee or Bunny; bat since they are inseparable and their powers of sympathetic pregnancy, parturition and motherhood are perfected, no-body is ever sure which. It is of little importance: "History", remarks Rushdie as Iskander Harappa chucks out a faithful mistress in order to assume power, "is natural selection". What people choose to remember is what matters, whether it ever took place or pot; what you thought you had forgotten will remember you in the end. Omar dies exactly as he had always feared to do, by falling off the edge of things at the end of the earth. Omar remains a large shadow, Raza and Isky bright puppets slogging slogans in the public eye. The Loser By George Konrad Translated by Ivan Sanders (Allen Lane, £8.95) Love and Glory By Melvyn Bragg (Secker & Warburg, £7.95) Scandal By A. N. Wilson (Hamish Hamilton, £8.95)

In the garden of a Hungarian asylum for the insane a man is possessed by a nightmare reverie - part distorted reflection, part fantasy. It occupies virtually the whole of the first sectioo of George Konrad's The Loser before gradually merging into a more accessible appraisal of the victim's past: his childhood; his persecution as a young Jewish communist at the hand of the police and in a labour battalion during the War; his own reprisals when the bourgeois regime to which he once belonged went under, his disobedience and disgrace and torture; a brief glimpse of restoration in 1956. followed hy further savagery from which he emerged into apolitical academic respectability. Melvyn Bragg's Love and Glory is about a television producer whose powers seem to be ebbing at a time when the tide in the fortunes of his oldest friend is being taken at the flood. Willie returns, jet-lagged, from America to find that he has been professionally degraded by the sharpie he trained. His marriage is fragile. Yet he is momentarily sustained by the radiant smile of a girl he passes at a railway station. gri he passes at a railway station. She turns out to be the passing fancy of old friend Ian, as well; but more palpably. Ian is on his way, established on the British stage; to Broadway adulation. Willie moons after the little actress. His brittle wife (a sympathetic character) controls her tippling in order to woo him back. His much-loved mother succumbs, to a terminal illness.

The girl is let down by the monstrously selfish Ian, whose wife takes a sad hand in the resolution, which is clever and perhaps, for some readers, a shade tentin There are some passages of analysis of the motives of the ary in completing the portrait of fighters of 1956 is candid and Willie, are mildly inflated. Willie is a confessed romantic:

The novel is densely wrought perception and good sense. Those of us who have hornets in our bonnets about narrative tech-

Admittedly, the vapid Hughie is peripheral to a very complicated plot in which an ascending MP of no discernible political faith achieves Cabinet rank, obliging him to put away childish perversions which have so far alleviated social and political pressures once a week at Hackney. Too late. (Films, recordings, letters exist.) The accontred tart who beat him in his school-cap is in the clutches of a pimp, himself the tool of an expatriate South African supercrook controlled by the KGB. For the most part, Scandal is a sinister farce in which Mr Wilson stage-manages the opening and shutting of doors and traps, the falling of trousers and divestment of other garments with case. Up to a point amusing: but his knowing detachment, archly disingennous commentary, and uncertain ear for dialogue (unless it is U or U minus) make his characters seem cut-outs, serving only the prefigurations of his sign. The narrative shifts as it lists. Towards the end of the novel, however, particularly in an excruciating scene at a private school, in which a little boy suffers for his father's disgrace, there is more compassion and a hint of some serious concern for the realities of pain, folly and innocence: even of evil.

The writer regrets

I'm not sure that either my fellow diarist, Peter Hillmore of The Observer, or our own Frank Johnson, a known associate of politicians, would institute the politicians and the second thank you for calling them "repu-table". They are nevertheless on the point of heeding the call from Paul Johnson for "reputable writers" to boycon the Literary Review. Both have contributed to the current issue, but neither is sure he wants any more to do with the magazine because of an article hy Roald Dahl discussing Israel's record in Lehanon in terms that Johnson describes in the Spectotor as "racial abuse". Hillmore says he considers the article "plain, abusive anti-Semitism which should never have been printed". Johnson says that even by the standards of anti-Israel hias, this piece was above and beyond the call of duty". Sir Kennelh Newman is proud of Scotland Yard's new neighbourhood watch scheme, which extols the virtues of "keeping a friendly eye and car open for a bener neighbourhood" on the assumption that every hurglar in London is dying to get his hands on your goods and chattels. Newman also believes that blacks and other minorities are as often the victims as the perpetrators of crime. Curious, then that the pamphlets outlining the scheme are printed only in English and show mainly whites - apprehensive housewives, police, villains and all except for one black mugger mugging an old lady. White, of course.

A helpful thing to do, and certainly a bit of a gamble; but is it sponsorship?

First try a lawful pursuit A log of rhetoric increasingly obscures the issues arising from the Russian destruction of the Korean airliner. Important points have apparently been overlooked. According to Article I of the Chicago Convention of 1944 – which is almost universally ratified through-out the world – the Soviet Union has complete and exclusive sovereignty over the airspace above its land areas and territorial waters. No international tribunal such as the International Court of Justice has ever qualified that complete, unfellered sovereignty. Attempts have been made to sci out rules which may possibly govern violation of airspace but in the absence of any decision on such questions the nature of the manner in which the sovereignty of a state can be diminished must necessarily remain highly speculative. In recent years a number of international lawyers have suggested that the following rules might apply:elatruding aircraft must obey all reasonable orders of the state over-flown including orders to land at a determined place, to turn back or fly on a certain course.

The state overflown must not, in attempting to control the movement of an intruding aircraft, expose it to danger, the "reasonable great action must be determined by such factors as the character of the intruding aircraft, its probable motives for intrusion, the possibility of control without the use of force, the proximity reason to believe the intrusion is hostile or harmful, the intruder may not be attacked. · Entry must be allowed for aircraft distress, subject to security considerations.

The only known claim for damages which attempted to test these proposals was made by 11 nations in the International Court of Justice against Bulgaria in 1959 for the shooting down of an Israeli aircraft. It was contended that Bulgaria did not enjoy complete and exclusive sovereighty over its airspace to the exclusion of the rights of every other state and had a duty to take all possible steps to control intruding aircraft or to issue a suitable warning before using force. No decision was forthcoming since Bulgaria made an ex gratia payment of compensation, while denying its obligation to do so.

Since the Soviet Union does not recognize the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice there is no hope that claims hy South Korea, the United States and others arising from last week's incident will be dealt with by that tribunal. Whether the Russians may, in due course, agree to negotiate on the claims put forward by the United States on behalf of the families of victims is another matter.

From the point of view of the aircraft's owners and the bereaved families the best thing that could happen now is that Moscow should, without necessarily accepting legal of the aircraft to important installations and the frequency of previous responsibility, agree to settle the Korean Air Lines hull loss and passenger legal liability elaims, thus reason to believe the intrusion is hostile or harmful, the intruder may to have to bear. Every possible step should be taken to avoid the wasteful and destructive litigation already begun in the US.

In theory the Soviet Union is bound to investigate because undoubtedly the shooting down falls within the definition of an accident in Annex 13 to the Chicago Convention, and in theory also it should invite South Korea as the state of registration and the US as the state of manufacture of the aircraft and engines to participate in its investigation: it seems highly unlikely that Moscow will honour its obligation in this regard, but pressure should still be applied.

What the Soviet Union has done does not fall within the categories of aeronautical crimes governed by those international conventions which deal, among other things, with hijacking, terrorism and so on. What, then, is to be done if the USSR is to have it brought home to it that responsibility must be accepted, reparation made and repetition avoided? Given the experience of sanctions after the invasion of Afghanistan, it is to be doubted whether relatively minor aeronantical sanctions will have the desired effect.

Instead, under the provisions of the Chicago Convention the US, South Korea and other interested states should urgently call on the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization to use its mandatory andpermissive powers (which are considerable - at last in theory) to consider and report on the sovereignty issue and its possible limitations, the degree of force used and the possible effects of the accident on the development of international air navigation.

Failing a useful result, the states should attempt to arbitrate the dispute sound attempt to arothize the dispute over the sovereignty issue within the Chicago Convention procedure with a view formally to establishing whether or not any of the suggested qualifi-cations of "complete and exclusive sovereignty" over airspace above land areas and territorial waters form part of international law and whether, depending on the answer to that question, the USSR met or failed to meet the necessary standard of conduct

The Soviet Union might well resist such an arbitration, but if it fails to comply with the requirements of the Chicago Convention its voting power in the assembly of the International Civil Aviation Organization could be suspended.

All this sounds mild by comparison with the stronger action so many have called for, but international agreements such as the Chicago Convention represent the lowest common denom nator of what powerful and less powerful states are prepared to accept. We should use what law we have before abandoning it as useless. The author, o solicitor, is coordinating editor of the 4th Edition of Shawcross and Beaumont on Air Law.

Winston Fletcher How to meet 'em and beat 'em

About 400 million people - approxi-mately one tenth of all humanity goes to a meeting every day of the year. Nobody knows why. Despite innumerable meetings discussing the subject, researchers have failed to discover the answer. Nobody ever admits they enjoy meetings. You can bet a chairman's gavel to three well-chewed pencile that pencils that almost everyone leaves moaning that it's all been a waste of time. None the less, they will all turn up at the next one - meetingolics desperate for a fix.

My own less-than-scientific re-searches have revealed several root causes of the addiction. Meetingolics attend meetings because they hate to be left out of anything; because they are scared of decisions being taken in their absence; because it makes them feel important; because they want a rest from their real work; because they want to offload the responsibility for a difficult decision; because they par-ucularly like the sound of their own voices; or - most frequently of all simply because the meeting happens to be happening.

Whatever the reason, all meetinggoers quickly learn that some people are far cleverer at manipulating meetings than others, some people have the knack of carrying committees with them, while others mumble, bumble, stumble and fumble.

Happily, you too can now learn the secret skills of meeting manipulation. During recent years social psychologists have carried out voluminous research into how people behave in meetings, committees and small groups; researches you have probably neglected to study. Perhaps yon have been too busy going to meetings. First, and contrary to common belief, many experiments have shown that groups arrive at riskier decisions than individuals do alone. This phenomenon, now known as the Risky Shift Effect, was first identified in 1967 by psychologists N. Kogan and M. A. Wallach. When no one is personally responsible, they said, it is safe for everyone to gamble. Furthermore, individuals prone to take risks exert most influence on other members of a group.

Second, and again contrary to conventional wisdom, meetings are oot games. The rules are too nebulous, there is no agreed system of scoring, and it is rarely clear who, if anyone, has won. None the less, they do share many of the characteristics of games competitive interaction, broadly agreed procedures; and a propensity for players to cheat,

If you wish to succeed in committees and meetings you will first need to develop the Seven Deadly Skills of meeting manipulation. In alphabetical order - aggression, conciliation, enthusiasm interrogation, patience, sulks and withdrawal. Let's consider each in turn.

Reticent meeting-goers seldom realize how undemanding it is to be demandingly aggressive. Tone of voice and threatening body language -cleaching your fist, banging the table -usually suffice. Wheo you look and sound furious people believe you are furious. Indeed, psychological research has shown that if you make yourself appear angry you will quickly make yourself feel angry.

However, you will probably still eed to work with your antennet confused with mere loquacity. True enthusiam involves the continuous innovation of idea and asguments, not the repetitious plodding-on of hohhy horses. Moreover, the enthusiast must eschew the ever-present danger of becoming a windbag. Perry and thrust, rather than monologue and filibuster, must be the enthusias:'s motto.

Fourth, interrogation. Skilled meet-ing-goers use questions to delay decisions, to incite arguments, often among others ("Surely what Charles is trying to say, isn't be John, is that your report is complete and niter"?; to prick pomposity and, of course, as statements in disguise: "Didn't that happen in Vladivostok?... Don't we normally achieve 17.65 per cent on jobs of this type? Wasn't it Smithson, Clarke who was caught with Fourth, interrogation. Skilled meet-Smithson-Clarke who was caugh! with his secretary in the stationery cupboard?"

Patience, fifth of the magnificent Seven, is universally admired. You simply listen to the arguments advanced by other combatants (not a lot of people do this), spot, who is on whose side, prepare your own case as effectively as possible, make speech

Wait as late as you dare before speaking, but never risk allowing the decision to be taken, or the chairman calling the subject closed.

Your use of suiks, must be rationed vigorously. Sulking generally works better in smaller meetings than in larger ones, and must never be selfpitcous. Its sole aim is to elicit sympathy.

Copious psychological research has been done proving, much as it may astonish you, that in small groups human beings are naturally sympathelic creatures. Berkowitz and Daniels in 1964 demonstrated that people give more help to those they believe to K dependent on them.

Hence the value of stulking. It is always worth sulkily sacrificing a trivial point in order to gain sufficient sympathy to win a subsequent argument you care about. Thus you can win worthwhile victories hy exploiting worthless defcats; hul keep a wary eye open for experienced meeting-goers who may themselves be huilding up sympathy against you. In meetings, when everyone is pretending to be nice, things can get presty nasty.

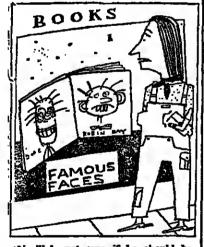

Finally, withdrawal, or committees interruptus as it might be called. You hardly need a PhD in maths to know that you can withdraw only once per meeting: and, sensibly, only once every few months at the most. This excludes brief tactical departures to go to the loo or make phone calls which, neatly timed, can throw a meeting - and more particularly your opposition -into confusion and disarray.

Withdrawal is exceedingly risky if the meeting has a strong and decisive chairman (a rarity); if somebody else present feels that in your absence they have authority "to speak for you": if everyone else suspects you to have been motivated by pique rather than by principle. Try to think through what will happen in the meeting after you leave. Remember that if you have clumsily misused one of the other six Skills you can try to correct your bloomer later. Once you have fled the proceedings, you've had it.

By now you will have gathered that

Mark Goyder Let's all manage to do better

The key to understanding the psychology of the Labour Party activist - to whom most of the leadership contestants' remarks are addressed - is 1945. That year is regarded as the golden dawn of ocialism. There was a government, so the argument runs, which was boldly socialist; it nationalized, brought into being the Welfare State, the planned full employment economy and the National Health Service. All the Labour Party must do is be bold and as socialist

What this argument neglects is the inconvenient truth that no great upheaval followed Labour's arrival in power in 1945. Attlee's election appeal was one of consolidation. The commitment to a full employment economy, the Beveridge welfare state, the new Education Act were all achievements of a wartime coalition in which Labour mimisters had worked with Conservatives and Liberals. Only Bevan, in his epic tussies with the Bevan, in his epic tusties with the doctors to secure the introduction of the NHS, really broke new ground. The achievements of those years may teach us more about the value of coalition government than they do about partisan manifesto-writing.

Whatever the myths, the postwar settlement leaves us with one indisputable reality. Government has nore to do; more institutions to run; more people to employ; more parliamentary edicts to satisfy. It takes vision to start a health service. It takes first-class management to sustain one and keep the vision alive. Is first-class management what we are getting? Within the last month it has been revealed that most head teachers owe their appointments to little more than a 45-minute interview and a study of their paper qualifications. Yet these are the general managers to whom we are entrusting the progress and quality of our children's education. Or consider the technical leaders of the health service: consultants, We

leadership which they give. Yet what arrangements do we make for monitoring their performance and stepping in where that leadership is not forthcoming? Effectively none. A general manager must answer regularly to his board; a beadmaster must face his governors but a consultant answers to no one. Only in extreme trans-gressions is he faced with any questioning, and that will come from a specially convened committee - of fellow consultants.

The Government is better at talking about the importance of good management than its official Oppo-sition. But too often it fails to observe the distinction between efficiency and effectiveness. Norman Fowler prides himself on the concern with efficiency that is pushing every health authority towards private contracting of ancil-lary services. If he were effective he would now be well on his way to implementing the Greenfield report on the huge savings to be made from generie substitution of drugs; he would be recovering the excess profits which the Public Accounts Committee found were made from the NHS by drug companies and would be insisting on a reduction in the rate of profit presently allowed to those drug companies.

The last thing this country needs is the kind of flag-waving legislation designed to demonstrate a party's intensity of feeling about issues without effectively influencing them.

Five years in opposition gives the Alliance the same opportunity created by the policy vacuum of the last war. to reconsider the purposes and methods of social provision. We will andouhtedly come np with some new departures - but if we do no more than ensure that headmasters are properly appointed, consultants supervized and drug companies' prices properly checked, we will have made more progress towards radical social policy than all the Labour contenders' flagwaving. The real opposition will be the one that does its homework on how to govern and how to manage.

But in Northern Ireland it is a live issue. This is partly because the province depends so heavily on cash transfusions from London and partly because Northern Ireland spending is a separate Exchequer item, so it can be scrutinized more easily. The figures show that last year Northern Ireland was granted £55m from the regional and social funds. What they do not show is whether Northern Ireland was £55m better off. Mr Jim Allister, vice-chairman of the Northern Ireland finance committee, says 40 per cent of the EEC money goes to Belfast directly, mostly in cash aid for firms. The rest goes to London, and how much is passed on is a matter of hot dispute. The Rev Ian Paisley, leader of the differences between its richer and poorer areas. It is given on the understanding that it is in addition to Democratie Unionist Party, told a European Parliament inquiry in 1981-that "at least two thirds" of the money was kept by the government as reimbursement for its own spending in Northern Ireland.

Treasury officials however said that EEC grants could be foreseen well in advance, and its spending plans therefore take these into account. One official said: "We would not be able to spend so much in Northern Ireland if we did not have this money - so therefore it is additional."

The trouble with this argument, like that of the other side, is that it is very difficult to prove. Allister said: "It is a very grey area, and we suspect it is deliberately being kept so."

Brussels is also watching the situation with considerable uncase. "Additionality" is a problem to some extent in every country, but Brussels spends more per capita on Northern Ireland than anywhere else except Greenland.

The strongest criticism so far came from the EEC's Court of Auditors which declared in January that the £685m hudget rebate money paid back to Britain in 1981 did not fund any development programmes, 25 it was supposed to.

It declared that the projects which Britain claimed were being financed by the money were well under way before the relate was adopted. Among them, apparently, was the MI-M2 motorway link which was actually finished before the rebate was agreed on.

This finding could influence European parliamentarians when they Brussels has begun tightening up the "additionality" rule. A grant of £63m recently allocated for urban renewal in Belfast carries the requirement that the government proves that the money is being used as a complement to its own spending. Forure funds may also carry this condition.

Both Eurocrats and Northern Ireland political leaders would like Belfast and Brussels to deal more directly with each other, so the money would bypass London. But no national government relishes loss of control and London regards the European Parliament's current inquiry on Ulster as rank interference.

One outcome of the finance committee's investigations seems committee's investigations seems certain: the report will make a strong plea for clarity in the way the government handles EEC funds. Such funds should not only be of extra benefit to the province, members believe, but they should also be seen to be so.

FRIENDSHIP WITH SPAIN

There were a lot of foreign ministers in Madrid yesterday but perhaps none whom the Spanish Government was soanxious to tak to as Sir Geoffrey Howe. He had more than three hours' conversation on Tuesday with his Spanish opposite number, Señor Fernando Moran, and vesterday an audience with King Juan Carlos. There will inevitably have been three main subjects of discussion: Gibraltar, Spain's application to join the European Community, and Spain's membership of Nato.

Senor Noran has not so far proved a particularly easy foreign minister for Britain to deal with. He articulates with far more evident conviction than his prime minister, Señor Felipe Gonzalez, the belief of the Spanisk Socialist Workers' Party (PSOE, to which both belong, that Spain does not and should not being to one of the world's great nilitary power blocks. He bitterly criticized the previous government for taking Spain into Nato last year shortly before a general election which it was clearly going to lose, and thus seeking to pre-empt a major national choice without a popular majdate to do so.

The party is committed to holding a referendum on Spanish membership while it is in office. Señor González's behaviour suggests that he hopes to be able to hold it in circumstances which flow him to recommend staying in. Senor Moran would almost certainly feel more at home agoing for a decision to oull out structure and, above all, if the question-mark over her December and Spanish enthusi-continued membership were asm for the Lisbon agreement continued membership were removed.

King Juan Carlos, there can be little doubt, shares that view. It requires no inside information to guess what will have been the burden of his remarks to Sir-Geoffrey yesterday. "Spain", he will have said, "is now incontrovertibly a part of Western comparing this attitude with the Europe and of the free world. British attitude on Hongkong She therefore has a profound interest in its security and there is no good reason why she should not play her part in its defence, nor why the Spanish people should reject the oppor-tunity to do so. Yet there is a real danger that they will do just that, unless they are given a clear lead.

"A particular difficulty arises from your continued occupation of Gibraltar, which all Spaniards without exception regard as rightfully Spanish territory. How can our people be asked to ratify an alliance with a power that occupies part of their land? A further difficulty arises from the constant delays and objections we encounter in our negotiations with the European Community. The political will to overcome the technical obstacles and the economic objections of particular interest groups seems lacking. It is difficult to convince our people that our new-found allies are really treating us as such." To which Sir Geoffrey will have replied that British support for Spain's membership of the come in. That way other mem-Community has been unwavering, and that, as for Gibraltar, Britain remains fully disposed to implement the Lisbon agreement of April 1980, under which the two Governments agreed to begin negotiations to solve their differences over Gibraltar, and Spain promised to "suspend" the restrictive measures then in force.

Spaniards have lately taken to The analogy is a false one. Britain has never claimed permanent sovereignty over the whole territory of Hongkong and has never made commitments to the inhabitants of Hongkong (who for their part have never claimed to be anything other than Chinese) such as she has given to those of Gibraltar. A much closer analogy, if less to Spanish taste, would be with the Spanish position in Ceuta and

Melilla on the Moroccan coast. Britain cannot and should not transfer sovereignty in Gibraltar against the will of its people. But, short of that, she should do everything to convince the people of Spain that she is indeed their ally and not their enemy. It should be clear that we are not merely willing but anxious to see Spain a full member of the European Community as soon as possible. and we should make explicit our willingness to see an increase in the Community's "own resources" when Spain and Portugal bers such as France will have a positive incentive to overcome their reservations. And we should make it clear that one of the things we would welcome about | Spanish membership is that it would give Spaniards and Gibraltarians reciprocal and equal rights to live, work and trade on both sides of what is,

Flooding danger in new mine

From the President of the Institution of Geologists

Sir, Your issue of Angust 24 (Spectrum) poses the question as to whether the inrush of water into the Wistow Mine in the Selby coalfield could have been predicted. The North Yorkshire area director of the NCB is quoted as saying that "Even with the benefit of hindsight we do not think there was any way that this affair could have been predicted".

In the evidence given by this institution to the Commission on Energy and the Environment's coal study this matter was addressed and I quote:

I quote: The Selby coalifield, by way of example, will lower the ground surface adjacent to the Yorkshire Ouse so that large areas will subside below the present groundwater level; drainage and pumping will be needed. However, athough the problems may resolve themselves after closure of the mine, we believe the risk of long periods of extensive flooding has now been enhanced to the extent that parts of the Selby mine could, in effect, be subsquecus. It is our view that the whole field of mine inflows and inrushes needs to be examined fir more carefully, particularity at a time when we are nationally turning to increased development of groundwater resources, many of which lie above coal measures.

The commission, in its recommendations, drew particular attention to the need for increased research into the response to subsidence of the whole rock mass between the ground surface and mine.

Selby is quite rightly a showpiece for our national coal mining industry. However, development on this scale can all too easily extrapolate beyond empirical knowledge gained from past experience. There is remarkably little hard fact available on the change in properties of the rock mass, including its water bearing properties, as it subsides above an operating mine.

If we are to guarantee a reasonable return for our national investment, then this is one of the many matters which will need to gain Mr McGregor's attention in the coming months.

Yours faithfully, J. L. KNILL, President, The Institution of Geologists, Geological Society Apartments, Burlington House, Piccadilly, WI. August 30.

Sir. In the flood of outrage and indignation with which the West has very properly reacted to the shooting down of the Korean airliner there is a danger that some of those principles may be submerged which the West claims to stand for. 1. Lost for words on 'the heritage'

From Mr J.P Carswell

Sir. I am rather in agreement with Miss Laski in her attack (September 2) on the word "heritage" as pompous and twee. Just the same, it is a word for a recent idea of great range and power, and it will be difficult to unstick.

It means everything from the past by which we identify ourselves, provided we have got it in our island, A Guercino picked up on the Grand Tour long ago, and parked in a country house is part of "the heritage", but not a Constable in a foreign museum or a railway built by British engineers in Peru. Apart from being restricted to our own soil, the notion is remarkably comprehensive. It includes not only the Tower of London but agricul-tural vestiges visible only by the aid or aerial photography; not only the duke's castle and possessions but (according to some) the duke himself. It certainly includes the Beefeaters and the ravens - perhaps even all our native animals, birds, insects and trees. It extends to private as well as public property, and that which is not property at all, provided it is here.

Such an important, if chaotic, idea needs a word and has been given one. "Heritage" is dislikable for the reason Miss Laski gives and because it suggests a property right where there is none. What then? "The heirloom" has too much of Lizzie Eustace and her diamonds. "The inheritance" and "the legacy" remind me of wills. "The treasure"is too glittery and limited, "the trust" too solemn and lawyerly. I suggest "the national entail" as something we occupy and ought not to part with.

From Mr Bernard Kennedy Sir. Although I have enjoyed living in Turkey over the last two years, find my views on the regime there more in keeping with those stated in your recent leader (August 15), than with the analysis of Roger Scruton (feature, August 30). Mr Scruton bases his defence of the generals on the pre-coup situation.

It was a very good argument less than three years ago, but since then General Evren and his colleagues have been taking an increasingly tough siance. Eighty per cent of the new political parties have now been excluded from November's election and I know from personal observation that the social democrats carried with them the nopes of many

Tuesday is most welcome

The idea appears to be particularly promising as it makes use of the fruits of experience garnered from the United States, including the. crime-pone city of Detroit, and plot projects in Britain. In strategic terms, it is part of the "conract" philosophy adumbrated by that most thoughtful polceman, Sir Kenneth Newman, Commissioner of the Metropois, which requires the police to "honour the conditions on which the public consent to be policid" while obliging the public to discharge sheir "civic dutics" by attending court as witnesses aiding fellow-citizens victimized by crime and assisting the pdice in its prevention.

The new watch schemes represent the practical application of his last aspect. Initially there are to be 75 of them, mainly ir south and south-east London. The police want the

FAIRNESS BEHIND BARS

The lates report from Justice, the British section of the International Commission of Jurists, focuses on the prison regime. The choice of subject and the treatment of it are pertinent. Of all areas of social control the prisons, where control is tightest, are the marest to breakdown in Britain today. The primary cause is gross overcrowding, already documented and well rehearsed in this report. The overcrowding puts some prisoners in noisome conditions, preys on the nerves of prisoners and prison officers alike, frustrates the more purposeful parts of the regime, and so increases the discontent of prisoners and decreases the job satisfaction of those who look after them.

In the confined and populous. life of a prison, especially when aggravatel by overcrowding, the fairness or unfairness of the system, subjectively experienced, assumes ligh importance. To protect the inmates from abuses of power by the staff, and from their whins or arbitrary displeasure; to protect them also from the violence or malice of their fellow-inmates; and to preserve the authority of the prison staf and protect them too rom injury or malicious fabrication, the rule of law, in the broadest ense of the expression, must pretail within the prison walks. That is a tall order in a community all of whose involuntary members (the majority) are there because they have broken the law. But a sense of fairness usually dwells in even the blackes heart, and it is by respect for he norms of fairness

From HM Ambassador to Poland Sir, Philip Howard's most entertaining article on tennis (August 26) speculated that "visitors from Mars would consider it an odd ceremony for a grown man to take seriously In my last post in Seoul I heard a more terrestrial reaction to support his view.

In 1892 King Kojong of Korea and his wife Queen Min were invited by the British Minister to watch the first game of tennis seen by foreigners in Korea. It took place in the British Legation, and the court still exists.

After some time Queen Min was heard to observe to the King: "These Englishmen are becoming very hot. Why do they not have their servants do it?

Editors, I am well aware of the gulf that has always existed between national and provincial journalists. But it is wider now than ever before. to the point where provincial editors are among the most vociferous critics of Fleet Street practices and attitudes, some of which have become quite unacceptable.

During my presidential year in 1979-80, I organised two private meetings between a small group of provincial and national editors (attended by the majority of Fleet Street editors) for a general exchange of views. If such a meeting were held today the message from one friend to another would be - put your house in order before yon drag us all down.

Peru's antiquities

From Mr Philip Joseph

Sir, You do a great service in publishing Edward Schumacher's alarming article (August 30) on the disintegration through decay and theft of Peru's unique collection of antionities.

The same situation applies to the many remarkable paintings hanging in Peru's cathedrals and churches. These paintings represent, probably, the largest known collection of the Cuzco school. They are rotting in their frames; many are beyond redemption.

Your columns have featured previously the problems of the trustees of the Getty Trust in spending many millions of dollars each year on acquiring works of art, in most cases from people who are looking after these treasures very well, and from countries who are not in the least enthusiastic about letting them go. May I, therefore, suggest to the trustees that in the case of Peru there is a marvellous and needy target for application of funds and expertise to save these irreplaceable importance of a strong core of generic training despite the ever increasing need also for specialist skills - hence the great length of the total training period. Doubtless under such pressures and the complex stresses of medical practice there is a tendency as training progresses, especially in some fields of specialization, for doctors to become blinkered. The inevitability and perhaps occasionally the desirability of this will sometimes need to be counterbalanced through colleagues in the paramedical professions working with us to share some of the responsibilities for holistic care.

Meanwhile, so far as medical practitioners are concerned, the Education Committee of the General Medical Council now holds statutory responsibility for co-ordinating all stages of medical edu-cation as well as long-standing specific responsibilities in respect of undergraduate medical education. Periodically it issues recommendations which are accepted and act as firm guidelines to medical educators.

Nearly 20 years ago these recommendations began to empha-

A glance at the more recent (1980) recommendations will reveal that great importance is now attached to viewing disease within the personal and social context as well as within its bodily/organ basis.

In my view British medicine is on an evolutionary course intended to incorporate those personal and social skills and understandings that are relevant to it whilst not forsaking its paramount, and in many ways exclusive, responsibilities to the public concerning a proper know-ledge of the body and its dysfunctions

Refugees' contribution

From Lady Monson Sir, The admirable eulogy on Sir Nikolaus Peysner and his fellow refugees of the 1930s has unfortunately led Mr Bernard Denvir

(August 25) to play down the Huguenot contribution to "British life and culture". Those earlier refugees introduced the word into the English language - also had qualities of "immense courage, intellectual energy of the highest order and a deep sense of moral probity" which were chronicled 200 years later by Samuel Smiles. He compiled a quite astonishing list of men of action, the arts, science, manufactures, scholarship and, of course, the Church.

Should others share Mr Denvir's unawareness of the degree to which this amazing breed of men and women contributed to this country, the commemorative year planned by the Huguenot Society to mark the tercentenary of the high point of the refugee, Huguenot Heritage, 1985. will dispel any doubts as to the magnitude of their achievements. Yours sincerely,

Dr Fuchs asserts that one of the statues, known as "Riace A" which portrays a king with rich flowing hair held by a headband,

Ever since holidaymakers spot- was probably the work of the non, while the other statue of the more relaxed hero whose helmet man who had worn a heimet, was was lost, he said, was made by probably Ajax. Both theories were aired, quite coovincingly, at this week's twelfth International Congress of Classical Archaeology in Athens, where a third theory was put forward for the first time by Dr George Dontas, a leading Greek archaeologist and director of the Acropolis Museum. Dr Dontas maintains that the two statues had stood on the monument of the Eponymous vise not, no such was made by Alcamenes, a pupil of the great Pheidias, best known for his work on the Parthenon frieze and the status of the Aphrodite of the Gardens.

Dr Dontas questioned the other two versions on the ground that if the statues were still in Delphi or Olympia at the time of Pausanies, they were unlikely to have been shipped to latly later. Plundered Greek art treasures, he argued, were not sent to Rome after the end of the first century AD, but to Constantinople.

It was true, he admitted, that the mountent of the Eponymous Heroes in the Agora of Athens was also described by Pausanias. Yet significantly, he did not attribute its statues to any noted man who would confront Hector sculptor Myron who lived by that time the statues were copies, the originals having been between 480 and 455 BC and carried away to Italy during the whose most famous work was the BC.

Shedding light on the high-power laser

A new way of making lasers that " generate beams of light more powerful than hitherto possible has been devised by two French-American research teams

Their first experiments have yielded an intense beam of light, but the next stage is to apply the same principles to a high power laser which can be trued to emit any chosen colour in the visible light spectrum, or any band of radiation in the invisible infrared, microwave, ultra-violet and X-ray parts of the spectrum.

The power and efficiency of the new type of laser makes it a candidate for weapons and ommercial application, and for the development of specialized processes such as the enrichment of uranium-235 and laser-induced photochemistry, which

By Michael Horsnell

Britain's expanding road network has caused an unacceptable degree of destruction of critical wildlife sites, Friends of the Earth, the environmental pressure group, said yesterday. On the eve of a three-day festival organized by the group to highlight the threat posed by the proposed M40 extension between Oxford and Birmingham to Bernwood Forest, one of Britain's most notable butterfly woods, Friends of the Earth said that the road programme is second only to modern agriculture in damaging sites of special scientific interest.

According to the Nature Conservancy Council, the Government's conservation watchdog, the 3,800 sites of special scientific interest are being special scientific interest are come damaged or destroyed at the rate of at least one a day. A spokesman for Friends of the Earth said: "This appalling catalogue of destruction is utterly unacceptable. The only solution unacceptions. The only solution to save our most endangered wildlife is to completely protect these precious sizes from the ravages of Department of Trans-port officials and landowners alike,"

The group, which was releasing details of preliminary research before it publishes a report later details this year, said that the Secretary of State for Transport has 2 duty under the Countryside Act, 1968 to protect the natural beauty and amonity of the countryside, and accused him and his predecessors of overlooking that obligation.

Between the wars his appointments took him to the West Indies and the Africa Station and he commanded . HMS Express during the Abyssinian crisis.

Even if consumer borrowing - the main source of higher bank-lending in recent months - tails off, as many expect, company demands for bank cash could well revive if the growth of profits slows.

The Bank must therefore be prepared for the possibility that it will have to overfund government bor-rowing this year - that is, sell more gilts than it needs to finance the gap between state spending and rev-enues – though this will probably be to a lesser extent than last year.

The ground for the City's new-found cheerfulness was prepared by last Friday's unexpected drop in the American money supply, which has at least taken the edge off people's more fantastic fears that US rates are set for a sharp rise.

the Treasury 11³⁴ per cent But the decisive factors 2003-07 mini-trap on Tueshave been domestic. The day, the authorities waded into the market a further money supply looks like coming back within target £300m of existing indexbefore long. The outlook for inflation looks distinctly linked stocks: £100m each of 2¹⁴ per cent Treasury 2001, 2¹⁴ per cent Treasury 2003 and 2¹⁴ per cent better than a few months ago (indeed stockbrokers Messel are predicting, against the more dismal consensus, that inflation will fall to 3½ to 4½ per cent by December 1984).

Opportunity

And the chorus of forecasts snggesting that economic recovery is slowing and will peter out next year has prompted speculation that the Government will now seize the first available opportunity to nucle interest rates down in an effort to keep the recovery going.

> Add to all this a strong exchange rate against almost all curencies except the dollar, and the case for lower interest rates by the time Parliament reassembles in late October tooks overwhelming.

The Chairman, The Lord Pennock, comments...

As a result of continuing tough trading conditions worldwide, the Group's pre-tax profit of £33.7m for the first six months is £16.3m below 1982.

Balfour Beatty continued its marked improvement in performance, but our manufacturing businesses suffered from the deep economic recession in Australia, Canada and South Africa and, in the early months, from intense price competition for BICC Cables and low demand in the USA for BICC Industrial Products.

In the last few months, there has been some improvement in orders for our manufacturing operations in Australia and the USA. This, together with the continuing strong performance in Balfour Beatty, should lead to an improvement in the second half. The extent of this improvement depends largely on the rate of economic recovery in the major territories where we operate.

Since then there has been £280m, against £308m in the first talk of a management buy-out and half of 1982.

But FMC is doing nicely and is not in urgent need of outside belp. Yesterday the company re-ported a dramatic turn round to profits of £800,000 against losses of £1,657,000. After all the problems of recent years there is, not surprisingly, no dividend. Last time anything was paid was in 1981. Even on the base live after allowing for another set of extraordinary debits, FMC is in the black with earnings per share emerging at 4.22pence against a 20.03pence loss.

The company says that all divisions contributed to the upswing. It is doing better than it was at this time last year. FMC, bowever, remains highly geared although bank borrowings at £10.4m represent only some 50 per cent of credit facilities. At 48p, up 4p, FMC shares continue to signal uncertaioties aboot the group's future. It is still 75 per cent owned by the National Farmers' Union and presumably this shareholding, NFU's own difficulties, is on the market.

The NFU borrowed to build up its 75 per cent shareholding hut ran into money problems when, with losses mounting, the meat company failed to pay a dividend. When the NFU attempted to get off the hook by floating a new company which would buy out its FMC stake, less than fim of the £10m required was subscribed by Britain's farming community. The failed NFU plan was for the new company to have paid 49pence for each FMC share.

Cement Roadstone

The dramatic slump in the Irish conomy is illustrated by half year figures from the Dublio-based company Cement Roadstone. Pretax profits in the half year to the end of last June fell from 1610 2 to 164 5m (52 16m to Ir£10.2m to Ir£4.5m (£8.16m to £3.6m).

Worse is expected during the remainder of the year when extra depreciation and interest costs result from commissiooing that is modernized cement works m Limerick will ensure that the company does little more than hreak even. Nevertheless. Rhadstone direc-lors are less pessimistic about prospects than they were at the annual meeting in May when there were doubts about whether there ossible to achieve even the

it was possible to achieve even the minimum budgeted profit level of Ir£Sm for the whole of this year. That is now within Roadstone's grasp despite the fact that Irish Cement deliveries are likely to be 15 per cent down on last year's level by the end of the year.

Cement Roadstone Half-year to 30.6.83 Pretax profit Ir24.5m (Ir210.2m) Stated earnings 2.34p (5.45p) Turnover Ir6212.5m (Ir2214.1m) Net interim dividend 1p (2.3p) Share price 54% up 2p. Yield 9.1%

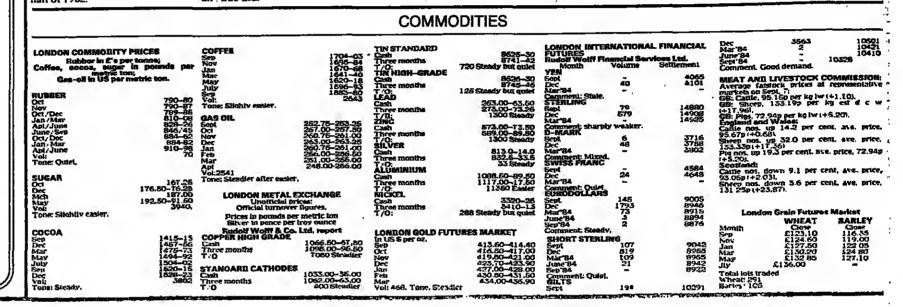

The commissioning of the Limerick works, which will help to push group borrowings up from 47 per cent to about 60 per cent of shareholders' funds by the end of the year, will give Roadstone a total of 2.1 multion tons of capacity in Ireland. At preseot n only needs 1.3 million tons.

The result of the overcapacity is that the group will for the foresecable future lose money in Ireland, while overseas operations will keep the company in the black.

But this will not case the advance corporatioo tax problem the company now has when paying dividends, as a result of the Irish Government's decision to start levving corporation tax. Therefire, Roadstone has more than halved the interim dividend payment to 1p.

Vhy the City is growing keener on Michael Ashcroft

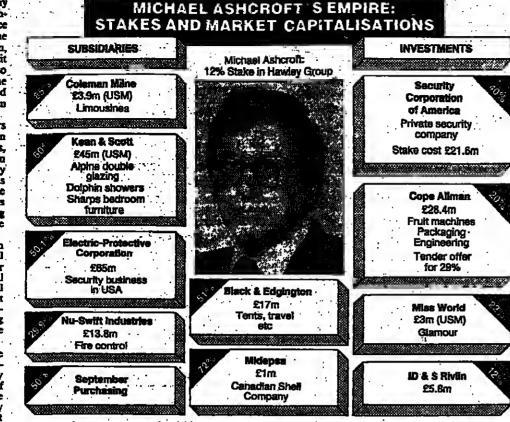

It is a sunny Saturday morning and Mr Michael Ashcroft sits in his modest office above the few shops that line the main road in Farnham Common, Buckinghamshire. Not only is it the weekend, but he is also supposed to be on holiday, so he is wearing a casual open-necked shirt and shoes which have seen better days.

He brandishes three circulars from Scrimgeour Kemp-Gee, an iofluential firm of stockbrokers. which looks at three of his main Hawley Group companies. "They all say 'buy', "Mr Ashcroft points out. It has taken five years but he is satisfied that the big brokers with clout in the City are sitting up and taking notice of what he has achieved.

The early Ashcroft curriculum vitae charts sound like a typical child of the 1960s. Grammar school was followed by technical college and a higher national diploma in business studies. But the schooling was quickly fol-lowed hy odd jobs, hitch-hiking round Europe and going on the dole a couple of times.

Respectability came when he joined the Rothmans manage-ment training scheme: "They where the two most boring years of my life." So it was back on the dole and "being kept by my girlfriend". That was 1969. Eight years later he had £1.3m in his back-pocket after selling his cleaning business which employed 4,000 people to Rekitt-

The decision which started the empire that grew into today's Hawley was almost fortuitous. Through a small merger business - which Hawley still has - be heard that a chain of 12 sports shops were for sale. He found the company - Birmingham's Haw-ley-Goodall, a tent maker - had serious financial problems and the bank was threatening to put in the receiver. So he took a stake to use as a Stock Exhange vehicle and has never looked back.

Curiously he had few conveotional City connexions. Curious because Hawley, with its big stakes in part-owned subsidiaries and small ones in an even greater number of smaller companies plays the stock market (and its Unlisted Securities Market offshoot) for all it is worth.

Mr Ashcroft now sits at the head of an enterprise he has built up from virtually nothing to a conglomerate with a stock market value of over £90m. But is he a success in his own eyes? "No, because it's a jigsaw which can never be completed.

The ball invariably turns at ine pair invariably turns at Lord's towards the end of the scason. This, too, is thought to be the latest that Middleser, have ever played a championship match here. The last first class match to have started at Lord's after Sectember 4 started at Lord's after September 4 was, I believe, between Yorkshire and the Rest of England on September 11, 1902. Until not many cars ago, the main ground belonged to the Cross Arrows from the first cek in September onwards. For week in September onwards. For playing the present match so late, Middlesex were given special dispensation, the reason for this being the World Cup, which deprived them of the use of the ground for three weeks in June. By Ales Gibson WORCESTER: Gloucestershire, with all first innings wickets in hand, cre 201 runs behind Worcestershire.

I saw a rather dismal match between these counties at Bristol last week and there did not seem much prospect of anything livelier sector prospect of anything inventer vesterday. However, it was a lovely Sectomber day, the ground was looking at its best, and Patel gave a touch of distinction to the proceedings with an elegant century. Otherwise it did not arouse much excutement. Worcestershire are naturally anxious to get away from the bottom of the championship table. Their score might prove to be a good one, since the pitch gave, ouches of hope to all kinds of. bowiers, and is not likely to improve unless there is a change in the weather.

Karadar should be too strong for Cup rivals

By Michael Phillips, Racing Corresponden

Swinburn have a good chance of gaining a lucrative double at Doncaster today with Karadar (2.45) and Shoot Clear (4.15). apparent with the Ascot Gold Cup and Goodwood Cup winner, Little Wolf, still out of action after the injury that he sustained during the Goodwood Cup. Karadar, who finished second to Little Wolf on that occasion, beaten only half a length, has the clear beating of Santella Man judged on that performance. It could also be argued that he has the measure of last year's Cesarewitch winner. Mountain in the Northumberland Plate at Newmarket earlier this summer. Goodwood after Mountain Lodge stood her race at Sandown, ground after a really encouraging If form means ground after a really encouraging gallop at Kempton last Friday, yet there are grounds for thinking of the day in the Kiveton Park hand, Karadar is at case on this ground and yesterday our Newmarket correspondent told me that a recent gallop indicated that he was in top form. Gildoran and British, the two three-year-olds in the field, finished first and second in a handicap at Goodwood in July. In the meantime both have been trounced at York. May Hill Stakes it is necessary to fly in the face of the form book because she will be meeting Satinette on 71b worse terms than in the Waterford Candelahra Stakes at Goodwood where there was only a length between them st Handicap is a nightmare to encouraging run the end. This I aam prepared to unravel. My short list comprises at Newmarket.

Michael Stoute and Walter do, because Shoot Clear won winburn have a good chance of dicisively at Goodwood just as aining a lucrative double at she had done at Newmarket and oncaster today with Karadar Warwick before that. 12.45) and Shoot Clear (4.15). Some will argue that there must Karadar's chance of winning the Doncaster Cup is that much more a mile because she is by the

Satinette's tendency to swish her tail when under-pressure makes me wonder how long she will go on giving her all. Tapaculo, who finished third to Cesarewitch winner. Mountain them at Goodwood, is held fair Lodge, if one recalls how they ran and square and I fear Out Of Shot more because she ran well at Goodwood after winning her first that she would prefer it much Stakes. The ground will suit him softer under foot. On the other and so will the distance, going on the way that he won the Hungerford Stakes at Newbury last month. There he showed both Tecorno and Drumalis a clean pair of heels over the last two furlongs and there is no apparent reason why either of them should beat him now on these terms.

Likewise it is pertinent to point out that Able Albert, who staged To fancy Shoot Clear to win the such a commendable comeback at York last month, is also held by Salieri if you go back to the way they ran against one another in the Free Handicap at Newmarket in the spring. True to form, the Portland sprinter, Bay Express. However she should have inherited suf-ficient stamina from ber dam, the distances varying from a mile to two four-year-olds, Melindra and Roman Ruler. Much may depend on the effect of the draw which is greater puzzle than ever at oncaster. Luck Penny and Doncaster Roman Ruler have both been both drawn high, whereas Melin-dra is low. If that is not a disadvantage then Melindra, who showed such blistering pace to win the Wokingham Stakes at Royal Ascot and at Kempton before that will be hard to catch over this peculiar distance of five furlongs and 140 yards. Melindra was found to be wrong after she had run so disappointingly in the Stewards Cup at Goodwood. But I am led to believe she is right again now and when she is right she is fast enough to run this sort of opposition off their feet.

For the second day in succession there is a mammoth programme at Salisbury, where of the races have been two divided to produce an eight race card, five of which are confined to two-year-olds. The conditions of the Dick Poole Stakes suit a filly of Malaak's ability.

Peter Smiles, the turf security chief, said at Doncaster yestenday, that his report on allegations of race-fixing by jockeys would be tendered to the stewards in two weeks. Fifteeo jockeys were alleged, in a national newspoper story; to have been involved in race-fixing after an alleged admission by a punter,

Harry Bardsley. He made claims that he had paid jockeys up to £1,000 a time to rig races and achieved betting coups, including one of almost £100,000 at

Royal Ascot this year. Athongh Mr Bardsley subsequently withdrew his allegations, the Jockey Club turf security squad went into action.

Steve Cram and Steve Overt are to provide the best possible finale to the world championship season by racing each other over the mile in the Coca Cola meeting at Crystal Palace tomorrow evening. The news will surprise everyone, who had got used to the conspiracy of events which prevented Overt and his former, distant claimant for the role of top middle distance runner in the world, Sebastian Coe, ever meeting up outside championships.

Shopping centres have proliferated so rapidly over the past 30 years that there are now more than 300 in Britain, many of which compete with each other. Problems have arisen as a result of their rate of spread.

First, shopping centres are no longer new and shoppers have had time to come to terms with "a 1960s-style . precinct proudly unveiled in the mid-1970s".

Second, shoppers who use their cars have a choice of centres and can easily compare the quantity and prices of goods on offer, and hypermarkets have sprung up to offer further competition. Third, the old-fashioned high street shop has fought back with late openings and the sale of specialist nbvinus. products. High street rents have fallen and competition from the multiple retailers has forced small concerns to modernize. Car parking, too - the lack which gave shopping centres a great advantage - is now more readily available. These abservations are made by Peter Wallis of the Specialist Research Unit, in a leaflet produced by Fitch & Co, shop interior designers with a vested interest in ensuring that the right shoppers pass their clients' their doors. Me Wallis says the basie pattern of shopping centres was fixed in the 1950s but has failed to evolve in pace with the changing tastes of consumers. "The first generation of shopping centres built in the 1960s and 1970s already look inadequate and uninteresting. The most venture-some, mobile and high spending shoppers now look for more

One reason may be that young Freddie has at last finished with distraction of growing up - the distraction of finding a fiance; she is a college student and a beaoty queen and former Miss Shreveport. Of finding the right fast cars; he leans to porsches. Of dedicating himself to his chosen sport. Spencer's high school basketball team were schoolboy champions. "If 1 had been a foot taller maybe even a little taller than that, I'd have gone for basketball, maybe professionally," he says with a touch of wistfulness, but no regret.

The Times Guide to career development Get WISE, women engineers

Next week BP's £1,300m Magnus platform, 120 miles north-cast of the Shetlands, will be inaugurated by the Successful and the second seco during e year on the undertaking.

"I was there when the structure was pinned on the sca-bed, Spanish welders,. Dutch crew, contractors and all were there too, but I found no difficulties. As a woman I was given the two-man resident engineer's cabin to myself." Margaret Thatcher, herself a science graduate, would approve.

A few years before the Prime Minister studied at Oxford University. Lady Platt, now chairman of the Equal Opportunities Commission, took a mechanical sciences tripos at Cam-bridge - one of five women and 250 men who squeezes the course into two wartime years. She went into acronantical engineering, working for Hawker Aircraft on top secret experimental flights in 1943-46. By coincidence, Helen Morion, who gained her second class degree at Cambridge 31 years later to 1974, found that she was one of five womeo out of 250 students on the course: the percentage improvement was virtually nil.

Today Helen Morton is one of an handful of women engineers among hundreds, in the BP Group engineering and technical department. The percent age follows the national pattern: 2.64 per cent of scientists and technologists are female; 2.32 per cent of technicians are female. Turned the ratio other way round, 94 per cent of all women in engineering work as operators, clerical staff and in unskilled grades.

That picture is the reason for an initiative which, with a neat sense of timing, is being press released next week: Women into Science and Engineering. WISE is the brainchild of the Equal Opportunities Commission and the Engineering Council, of which Lady Platt was an early member before she joined the EOC in May. WISE will officially take to the road - interally with an exhibition bus if possible - m January.

She is as enthusiastic ebout this initiative-"it must reach the grassroots, schools, universitities, parents, and encourage. a groundswell from the industrial sector"-as she was about her own career. "I loved the work at Lawkers. The men on the shop floor became my friends and gave me a lot of help when I needed it. I joined British European Airways in research and development after the war. You needed a bit of courage to walk into a nonraditional job, but that was more challenging than finding 20 women who say 'it's done like this' A generation later Helen Morton was determined to success to show, for example, that women can work on cil-rigs in the North Sea. But she first sited work in shallower water, with the Thames Barrier in 1976-8 "I believe you have to convince the management by sucking, not by being pushy, agressive or complaining. If I were labelled as a feminist they wouldn't take me aeriously." She is still hoping to taste "the giamorous side" a posting abroad, "San Francisco would be wonderful: China is faintly on the cards", she says. Meanwhile, "a lot of the work is administrative. "I'm, involved with studies for off shore platforms-when they take off that's Helen is secretary of the Women's Engineering Society whose 500 members are mostly in London and Manchester, and include a few university groups. The society gives careers advice, holds seminars, publish-es a quarterly journal, (The Woman Engineer), and distributes a video of the BBC TV film on careers for women m engineering, made in the Open Door slot. Jobs for the Boxs? There are two slot. Jobs for the Boys? There are two, daughter organizations - the Electrical Association for Women and the British Women Pilots' Association.

To Lady Platt, all progressive developments are relevant to the success of the year-long Wise Course, but they must be onitored. The EOC has just awarded £5,745 to Richard Pearson of the Institute of Manpower Studies at the University of Sussex to study the effect company sponsorship has on women studying engineering.

He will be looking at how sponsor-ship influences choice of course and career, and why women, who now make up 5 per cent of engineering students in higher education, have difficulties in gaining practical work experience. Dr Susan Ballivant of the department of metamatics mathematics department of engineering mathematics at Loughborough University will soon report to the Engineering Council and the EOC on current projects aimed at encouraging girls to take up engineer-

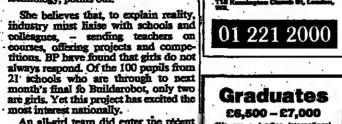

They are surprisingly numerous if small in scale. At Norwich City College, 14 women over 25 years old have just completed a one-year full-time course to gain basic engineering skills. The University of Bradford recently held a seminar for younger students, on "Chemical engineering: a career for women". This month the Polytechnic of the South Bank is launching a one-course in electronics for y The Engineering Industry Training Board (EITB) had 400 GCE A-level and SCH H-grade pupils on its Insight 1983 three and four-day residential pro-grammes at 10 universities, to focus on engineering careers. A total of 823 applications were received - half had to be turned down, but the board hopes to repeat Insight in 1984.

Their Girl Technician sponsorship is not so, keenly taken up. This aims to encourage girls to train as technicians by giving a grant of £6,000 to firms who recruit a gril extra to their technician requirements. Up to 250 grants are on offer, but under half that number have been applied for. "We are anxious to get the full complement, and girls can be considered up to November", says John Bourgoin of the ETTR. Simple careers advice is offered in the board's leafter. leaflet - Engineering needs the woman's Will WISE prove that to be true? Alex Lady Plant believes the answer is yes, but only if females recognize that engineering embraces everyone's life: it Neil is the pump that supplies water to our taps, the wheel of a car, a television screen.  Irving Johnson is a name the cinema history books forgot to mention. All credit, then, to TRAVELLERS IN TIME (BBC2, 8.30pm) for giving this amateur movie-maker his due, albeit half a century late. It was clear the American had a head for danger from the way, early on, that he stood on his head on top of a telegraph pole and dived, head-first, off a speeding penny-farthing. But that wes mere youthful fun compared to the way, in 1929, when the barque Peking was carrying him and 5,300 tons of coke and white china lavatory basine through tumultuous seas off Cape Horn, he took up a position in the teeth of e gale at the top of a mast, and hand-cranked his camera as the 80ft waves surged across the decks making it continues to brazen it out

From Richard Owen Moscow

Despite signs of confusion and uncertaioty behiod the scenes in the Kremlin, the Soviet leadership is reportedly convinced it can persuade its own people and the world at large that Soviet action against the Korean airliner was jusufied. Informed sources said some Soviet leaders were dismayed that Moscow had been forced to admit that a Soviet fighter pilot was ordered to "stop" the Korean iumbo six days after the Kremlin had iosisted that it did not know how the 747 had met its fate. Diplomats speculated that the Soviet Union might now produce cleventh hour evideoce to counter the effect of the damaging proof produced by the United States. Soviet officials have repeatedly asked why Washington has oot made public recordings of the conversations between the KAL pilot and ground control as well as the Soviet fighter pilot's exchange cs with his command, and have hinted that Moscow can produce the "black box" flight recorder to bolster its case.

Pravaa said on Tuesday that the jumbo pilot knew be was above Kamchatka and bad told ground control be was "on the correct course"

Muscovites approached on the street yesterday said the Govern-ment's admission on Tuesday night that the jumbo had been shot down, as the Americans claimed all along, had not appreciably altered their view of the affair. Most Russians said they accepted the official line that the plane had been spying

Some Russians admitted, that they were that the Soviet however "shocked" Government, normally presented night as infallible, bad admitted a mistake had been made, even though the acknowledgment was an oblique one.

The government statement confirmed that the order to destroy the jumbo had come from local air defence command, implying that it had not been referred to Moscow.

Diplomats said the Kremlin none the less believed it could limit the damage to Soviet prestige, and that its tactie had been to delay any admission of culpability loog enough for Soviet counter charges against Washing-ton to have an effect on opinion at home and abroad. "We found the Soviet account outrageous when it was first issued" one Western diplomat commented "bul Moscow obviously thinks it has become more acceptable through constant repretition."

Letter from Athens Greece bows to the Scotch invasion Fix had hoped to be able to Fix han hoped to be able to repay debts of £40m by developing the land of the two deserved old breweries in central Athens. But the bank held mortgages and the Socialist Mayor of Athens announced he planned to take the land and news that the Fix The newery, the country's oldest. has closed down because of has closed down obcause of debts, came as a shock to Athenian old-timers who still lament the passing away of the Cosy Wine Shop, and blame this sudden break with tradition on the drinking habits of the new emerging

Soft drink bars combined with pizzerias and fast-food stands crop up daily at Athenian were jailed for debts to the state, and the company prop-erty was impounded. The street-corners with a speed that becomes insulting for a nation becomes insulting for a hadded that invented Dionysos and the vine. But the young Athenians oow seem to find their pleasure cleswhere, while the older ones drown their nestalgia in whisky and soda, a rapidly rising rival cry and let them run it. Greek wine manufacturers claim that whenever the economy is in the doldrums, their business flourishes because people drown their sorrows in wine. But their trouble this year is that and south a rapidly fit. "Fix" had been a household word for beer for well over a century, since it was founded by a Bavarian metallurgist's son turned brewer in 1864. Johannes Fuchs won a beer monopoly in Greece which his descendants. completely Hellenized under the name of Fix, held for over 100

The decline began when Fix lost its exclusive right in 1965. Monopolies breed few friends and the involvement of a controversial family relative in the impassioned Greek political scene of the time fostered a boycont that squeezed Fix's share of the market to below 10 per cent. This bappened in spite of a steadily rising demand for beer as the popularity of wine dwindled.

Scotch whisky, which is rapidly becoming a national favourite to the point that it is served to visitors even in the "Between 1975 and last year "Between 1975 and last year the per capita wine consump-tion in Greece fell from 42 litres to 38.5", says. Mr Vassilis Kourtakis, president of the Wine Manufacturers Associ-ation. "This is the result of urbanization. People from the province are accustomed to remotest Greek village. "Whisky has entered our houses through tourism and television." said Mr Kourta-kis. "It is considered a 'clean spirit'; it serves as a status symbol, and has largely replaced pastry as a handy provinces are accustomed to drinking loose wine. When they present to give on our ournerous namedays. Last year Greece imported over six million bottles of drinking loose while, when they move to the cities, they cannot get used to bottled wine." So they switch to beer and, expecially the young, to soft drinks made more attractive by improved qualities and good advertising. Beer consumptioo rose from 19 litres in 1975 to 28 litres last war. litres last year. Anticipating an even greater demand for beer (considering that the average Englishman drinks over 100 litres a year). five well-known European brands rushed to set up breweries here. By 1982 their production capacity exceeded by 25 per cent the local demand. The glut, combined with a freeze on the beer price imposed
